A couple of years ago, there was a huge megahit movie about a family that went on vacation and accidentally left one kid home alone. Now the long-awaited sequel has finally arrived, but actually, it's more like a xerox of the original than a sequel to it. So, if you saw the first one, you already saw...

HOMEBOY ALONE, TOO

And this time the producers are getting their...
LOOT IN NEW YORK.

WRITER: LOU SILVERSTON
ARTIST: WALTER BROGAN

Is this film the same as the first one? I don't think so. I never put my hands on my cheeks and scream, "YAAHHH!" and this time we're going to Florida for a vacation, not Paris. Which is really a stupid idea. I mean, they don't even have Xmas trees in Florida.

Big deal, you can climb up a palm tree and paint the coconuts red and green. Maybe I'll get lucky, and you'll fall and break your neck. That would sure make my Xmas merry.

Now, Fuzz, you don't really mean that.

I don't? Okay, maybe he'll just bust an arm and get a concussion.

There, that's better.

Kloven, you creep, don't you know it's bad luck to open an umbrella in the house?

I'm just taking precautions in case I have to sleep with cousin 'Wet the Bed.'

You'll need more than an umbrella; how about a wet suit? Ha! Ha! Come on kid, drink up!

Glub. Glub. Glub.

Let's go, everybody! It's time for the Xmas pageant.

EBENEZER, THESE ARE OUR KIND OF PEOPLE.

HUMBUG!

HAHHHHOOOOHOO!!
That Fuzz is a riot!

Why are they laughing? Is my fly open? Oh no, it's Fuzz!

Kloven has no sense of humor.

He's such a troublemaker.

Leave it to that brat to embarrass the family.

Kloven, apologize to your brother for hitting him.

I won't! I hate him; I hate this whole family! I wish I was going on vacation by myself!

You got it,
kid.
Tomorrow
it's "Gooooood
morning,
New York!"

We overslept again! Hurry, or we'll miss the plane.

Does everybody
have their tickets?

Not only do I have my ticket, I also have Dad's wallet.

I have a feeling we forgot something.

I'm in New York and my family's in Florida. Now all of you kids out there, listen up. If this ever happens to you, don't ask a cop or airline personnel for help, and don't call your parents. What you should do is take your Dad's credit card, register at an expensive hotel, and pig out on pizza and ice cream.

Did you lose your luggage?

No, thank God, it's all here. We lost our son.

Luggage we can trace,
but kids? Why don't you go put his picture on a milk carton.

Look at all this money! Merry Xmas, Mirv.

Like Scrooge said, "God bless us, every-one."

I think that was Tiny Tim. Speaking of Tiny Tim, that kid is here and he's taking a picture of us robbing the store.

I hope he got my good side.

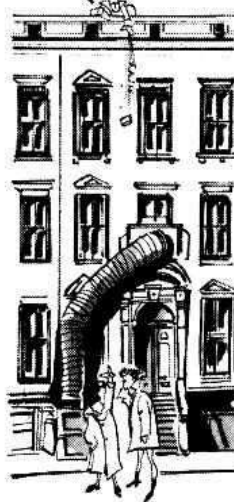

Hey you guys, come and get me!

There he is, on the roof!

What's he doing up there?

He's throwing bricks.

Right, that is what he's doing.

I can't understand parents. They don't mind their kids seeing people getting their skulls caved in with bricks.

set on fire, blown up.

shot with a staple gun, falling down stairs...

...but if we showed a naked body or I used one of my famous four-letter words, they'd say this movie wasn't fit for kids.

And people said we were violent.

Which way did that kid go?

He went into the park.

We gotcha, ya little @#$$%$#!

Let him go!

Don't worry; it's only some old dame with a flock of pigeons. What can pigeons do?

Run, Kloven, run!

You hadda ask!

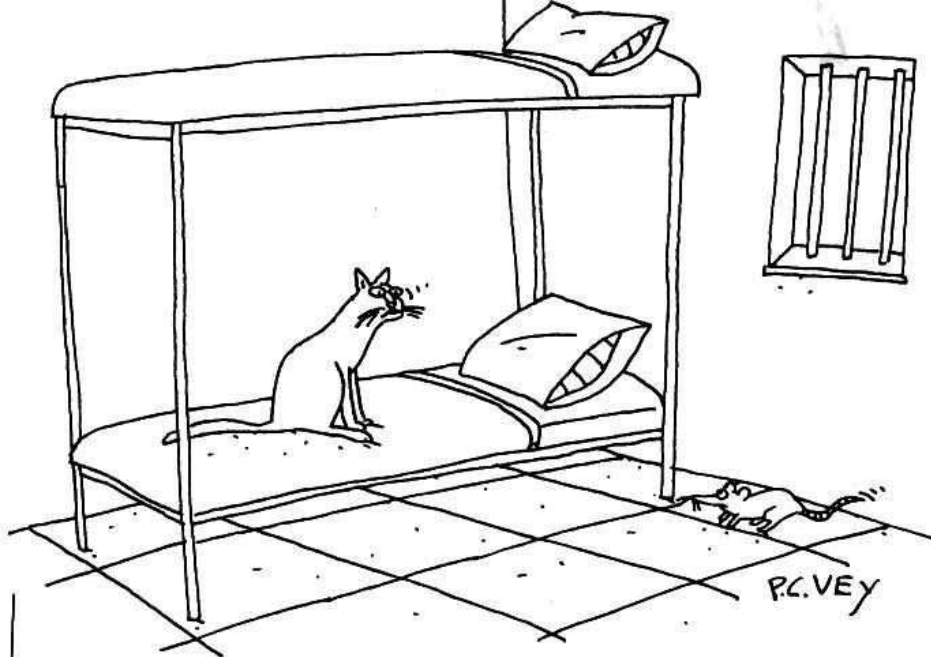

I'd rather get zonked with a brick than this!

TEST YOUR FIRST AID KNOWLEDGE!

ARTIST:
JOHN SEVERIN

1. You stumble upon a person who is bleeding profusely. You should...

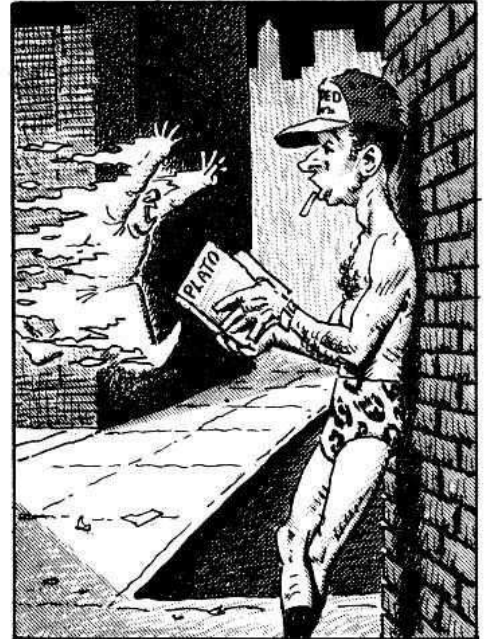

- A. apologize for not watching where you were walking, and promise it'll never happen again.
- B. advise the person that cream soda and cold water will remove most blood-stains from most fabrics if applied before the blood dries.
- C. try not to fall upon the person when passing out.
- D. call a doctor.

2. You're at a restaurant. Suddenly, a person at the next table jumps up, clutching his throat and turning blue. You should...

- A. exclaim to your spouse, "See why I like to eat at home?"
- B. mock the rude, immature boob by doing the same.
- C. tip the waiter big for this vast improvement over the old floor show.
- D. call a doctor.

3. While loitering on a street corner, you see someone race out of a building, their clothing all ablaze. You should...

- A. look away, as no one likes to be seen in this embarrassing condition.
- B. think, "Gee, that reminds me—I need to check the battery in my smoke detector!"
- C. conclude, "Boy! All those nuclear power plants have really had a nasty effect on our fireflies!"
- D. call a doctor.

4. During a business lunch with your boss, he suddenly starts to violently vomit. You should...

- A. look at your plate to make sure you didn't order what he ordered.
- B. apply a tourniquet to his neck.
- C. visualize how your desk will look in his corner office.
- D. call a doctor.

5. You wake up one morning to hear your wife claim she's suffering from complete amnesia. You should...

- A. tell her you're the plumber and she owes you $80,000.
- B. try to get her to remember your life together by showing her all your bills, your lousy house and neighborhood, and having her talk with your obnoxious relatives.
- C. claim amnesia, too, and run away with her to start a new life before the kids wake up.
- D. call a doctor.

6. Your partner on a camping trip comes running up to you, clutching his thigh and babbling incoherently about rattles and fangs. You should...

- A. shake your head and cry at the heretofore unsuspected extent of the drug problem in the U.S. today.
- B. run and get your video camera for a shot at the $10,000 prize on 'America's Funniest Home Videos'!
- C. assure your friend that you'd kneel down and suck the venom out, but Pat Buchanan might wander by and not understand.
- D. call a doctor.

7. You see one of the golfers in your foursome fall off the bridge over the creek, hear a dry snap, then watch as he struggles up the bank with an arm wrapped oddly in his shirt. You should...

- A. immediately suggest that the stakes you're playing for be doubled.
- B. remind him that club rules prohibit him from wearing a shirt in this way, then suggest that the stakes you're playing for be doubled.
- C. ask him if he happened to see that orange ball you lost down there last year.
- D. call a doctor.

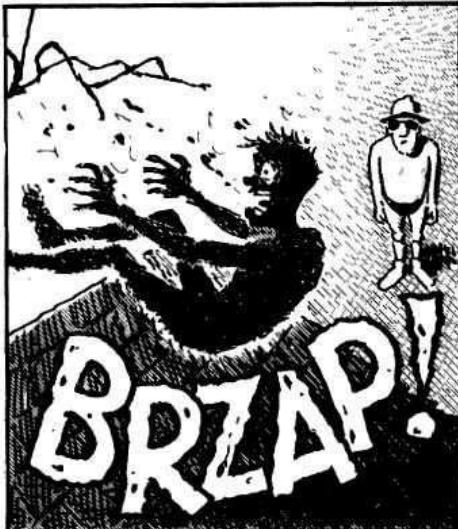

8. Your date screams as the monster appears on the screen, then falls over as if suddenly asleep. You should...

- A. tell anyone who looks your way that your sister is given to sudden fits of nervous exhaustion and donations are welcome.
- B. take this opportunity to go through her purse.
- C. slip away for a better time while you can.
- D. call a doctor.

9. A neighbor putting up a new TV antenna accidentally touches a high-voltage powerline, sending sparks flying as he falls into a smoking heap on his roof. You should...

- A. run next door and tell his wife she might want to think about getting cable.
- B. yell up to him, "That's OK, buddy! Feel free to keep that ladder of mine just as long as it takes you to get it right!"
- C. call the EPA and report this blatant violator of the laws against open burning.
- D. call a doctor.

10. As you're driving through the Southwestern desert, you see a man crawling in the sand towards the road, his tongue hanging out and his skin horribly blistered, begging you, "Water...water," over and over. You should...

- A. ask him to try to recall the second verse of his song, as the first verse is getting pretty annoying.
- B. write an angry letter to your Congressman demanding immediate aid for the homeless, the very minute you get home.
- C. whistle in awe at the ability of the American chameleon to disguise itself from predators.
- D. call a doctor.

11. Upon returning to your office after lunch, you find your secretary wailing about her savage migraine. You should...

- A. tell her she's wrong—that birds migraines, but that savages tend to stay in their villages.
- B. accuse her of pilfering the migraine you had yesterday and summarily fire her.
- C. reassure her that the problem is all in her head.
- D. call a doctor.

12. In the middle of a skiing trip, you happen upon a man dazedly making his way back to the inn on foot, the fingers of his right hand a vibrant blue. You should...

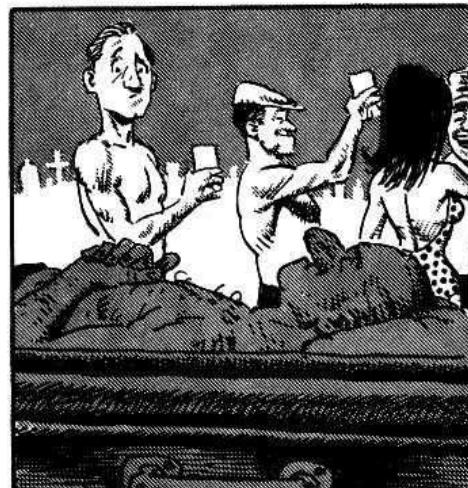

- A. envy his ability to cool his drinks with his thumb while you have to go all the way to the fridge for an ice cube.
- B. try to burn the color into your memory, as it may well come in handy during your next watercolor class.
- C. stop and help him use snow and ice in an attempt to get his left fingers the same color, so he'll have a matched set.
- D. call a doctor.

13. While opening your monthly bill from the phone company, you feel a sharp twinge in an index finger and realize you've just received a papercut. You should...

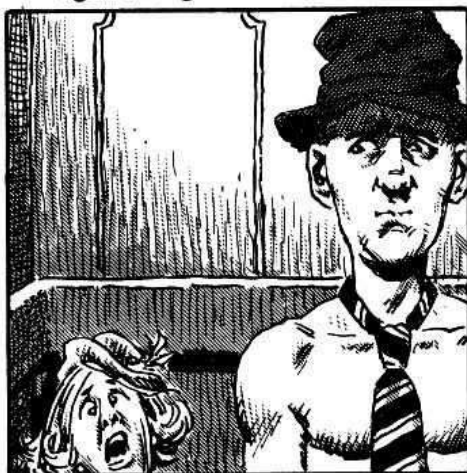

- A. run to your kitchen, widen and deepen the cut with a dirty knife, then pour salt and vinegar on it.
- B. ponder the ability of the phone company to provide you with a far sharper edge by accident than the company which made your hi-tech razor ever could on purpose.
- C. calculate the probability of winning a lawsuit against the phone company which would get you $5 for the cost of your bandage and $5,000,000 for your mental anguish.
- D. call a doctor.

14. While wandering your local cemetery in search of a fresh body, you come upon a party and decide to join in the festivities. Suddenly you realize that the guest of honor is flat on his back and looking a little peaked. You should...

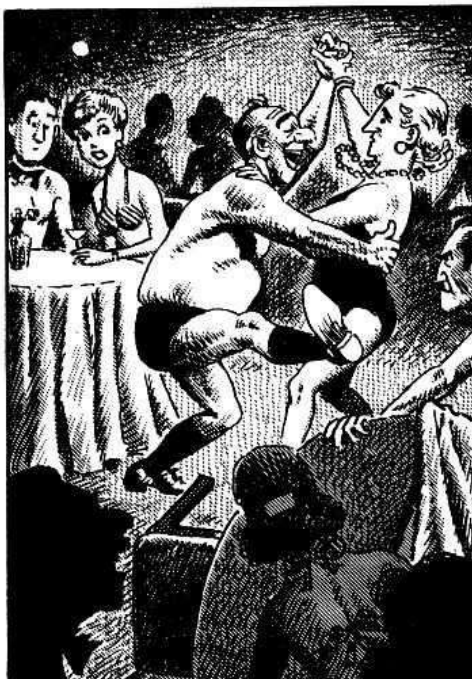

- A. wave everyone back and perform mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.
- B. try to bring the color back to his face by pouring some of the bourbon from his flask between his lips.
- C. politely but firmly inform the main speaker that he seems to have lost the interest of the most important person present.
- D. call a doctor.

15. While trapped between floors in a malfunctioning elevator, you watch out of the corner of your eye as a very pregnant woman drops to the floor and screams, "The contractions are coming fast and close together!" again and again. You should...

- A. ask her to please try to recall the second verse of her song, as the first verse is getting pretty annoying.
- B. pledge $50 to the research foundation attempting to find the cause of her condition so that women in the future may be spared her agony.
- C. try to keep her spirits up by telling her that the elevator cable might well snap before she gets to the really excruciating stages of childbirth.
- D. call a doctor.

16. While at a nightclub, you watch as a guy trying to dance succeeds only in splitting his pants, trampling everyone near him, and knocking over three tables and a wall. You should...

- A. suggest that he get a good pacemaker for his weak sense of rhythm.
- B. see to it that he has at least one right foot transplanted onto the ends of his legs.
- C. ask the DJ to please stop playing records.
- D. call a doctor.

17. In the course of your best friend's wedding, you become convinced that he's marrying the wrong woman. You should...

- A. have the person performing the ceremony ask the groom how many fingers he's holding up before proceeding to the "I do" part.
- B. step in and rescue your pal, using the Jaws of Life if necessary.
- C. change your wedding gift from a toaster to a lifetime supply of anti-rejection medication.
- D. call a doctor.

SCORING: It really doesn't matter, since if you try any of the above you'll be hit with massive malpractice suits and stuck in court for the rest of your life.

PLAY-MEAT

A sausage necklace? How about a car made out of veal? Train that slow or unmotivated child for a career in the meat industry at an early age! Kids will love molding ground chuck and raw pork, lamb and veal into interesting and funny shapes! Or: press meat patties against comic strips to pick up fascinating images!

JFK ASSASSINATION PLAY SET

What really happened in Dallas that fateful day? Miniaturized Dealey Plaza play board includes Texas School Book Depository Building, complete motorcade, grassy knoll, railroad bridge, and dozens of CIA and Mafia assassins! Not only will kids love figuring out the countless possibilities, but they'll learn the importance of distrusting their government!

ANIMAL SPECIES THAT DIDN'T QUITE MAKE IT (...AND WHY.)

The Flying Cow

The ability of the flying cow of the Cenozoic to procreate was thwarted by early man's hatred of the legendary 'pie-in-the-sky' bombs it dropped. All were wiped out by the end of the Pleistocene.

The Tree-Dwelling Yak

A primitive precursor to today's long-haired yak, this doomed creature found swinging on vines too difficult without the benefit of opposable thumbs. It died out completely in the late Jurassic Period.

The Domesticated Toad

Due to a violent outbreak of warts among early cavemen, the primitive toad-pet was shunned, and forced to adapt to its present-day environment.

Cuneiforms by Donald J. Neiswinger
Petroglyphs by Bruce H. Bolinger

The Arctic Giraffe

Predecessors to today's African grassland giraffe once migrated north to live in the frozen tundras of Northern Asia, but found they were ill-equipped to adapt to the harsh climate, as their scarves kept unwrapping from their long, shivering necks.

HUFF HUFFA HUFF PUFFA HUFFLE HUFF HUFF

The Loch Ness Seagull

These daring Pliocene gulls just couldn't seem to modify their swoop-and-catch method of fishing for use in the Loch Ness area. Their lineage was so brief that most textbooks don't even mention them.

The Farm Kangaroo

Inventive Colonial farmers soon realized their imported Australian kangaroos didn't give milk, the crazy things couldn't lay eggs, and they did a really crummy job of pulling plows. The whole troop was shipped back, and exchanged for sheep.

The Urban Chicken

Failing to develop lips and teeth for whistling, the urban chicken's inability to hail cabs forced the subspecies out of the big city and back into the heartland, where they became Free Range Chickens.

The Burrowing Buffalo

Threatened with extinction by overhunting in the 19th century, the buffalo underwent a series of mutations geared towards underground existence. No one knows why this variation of the species died out.

The Standing Snake

Unbeknownst to most 20th-century zoologists, a remote branch of carnivorous, Neolithic reptiles actually did evolve into an erect, walking species of their own. Unfortunately, they could also reach bar counters and become alcoholics. They ended up back on the ground, and decided to stay there.

The Mountain Turtle

As hard as these Mesozoic turtles tried to adapt to their newly-formed, elevated surroundings, they just kept rolling down the sides of the mountains. Finally, they gave up in frustration.

The Deep-Sea Lemming

An absence of gills has always been the major hurdle for this still-evolving type of rodent. None have successfully adapted to date.

The Marsupial Hippo

As does today's hippo, the now-vanished marsupial hippo species loved a nice, relaxing swim. This presented a serious obstacle for pouch-bound offspring.

The Aquatic Elephant

These ancient mastodon-like mammals found they couldn't hold their heavy trunks up long enough to stay underwater more than an hour at a time. They didn't last long.

Re: Current success of

'Superman Dies'

To: All Marvel Editors
The death of Superman has made so much money that we should consider killing off
some of our own superheroes.
And if not killing them, then something equally dramatic. If it doesn't work, we can always say "It was all a dream!" in the

Dr. Spamuel Buckett, a scientist from the future with a tremendous amount of Frequent Flier Mileage to his credit.

By accident, he is hurled into the unknown world of a Quantum Leap.

Spam 'leaps' into the bodies of other people, and with the aid of a hologram named Ail he attempts to right the wrongs of the past.

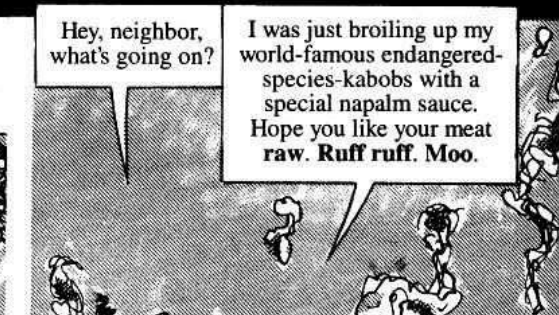

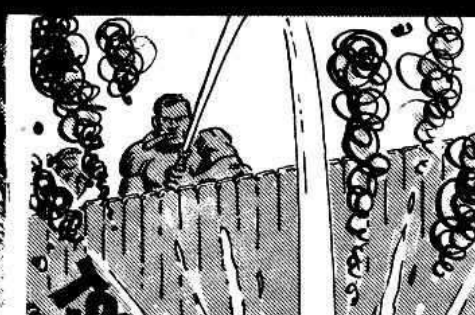

Why doesn't he do us a favor and right the wrongs of the present—like TV shows?
Especially that turkey—

AQUATIC LEAP

(So it doesn't make any sense; it fits in with our swimsuit theme.)

WRITERS: ERIC GOLDBERG & MARK HOWARD ARTIST: JOHN SEVERIN

'Home Improvement' is a popular show. Why are we here?

Tim's super-he-man routine is causing him to lose his female audience.

Ruff ruff bark bark meow...

Tim, you might be more popular with the ladies if you spent more time exploring your feminine side. Today's women don't go for that caveman approach.

You got that right.

Why don't you come over here, Tim.

DOES THE HULK USE STEROIDS?

That and his cooking.

We'll start with etiquette. You're in a fancy restaurant. When the salad comes, which fork do you use?

What's a fork?

LATER...

Are you hungry?

Yeah! Let's go to McDonald's, or Burger King, or Pizza Hut or...

I think we should change the kids' diet. Their cholesterol levels are higher than our Nielsen ratings.

Don't worry, Jill. There's going to be a lot of changes around here.

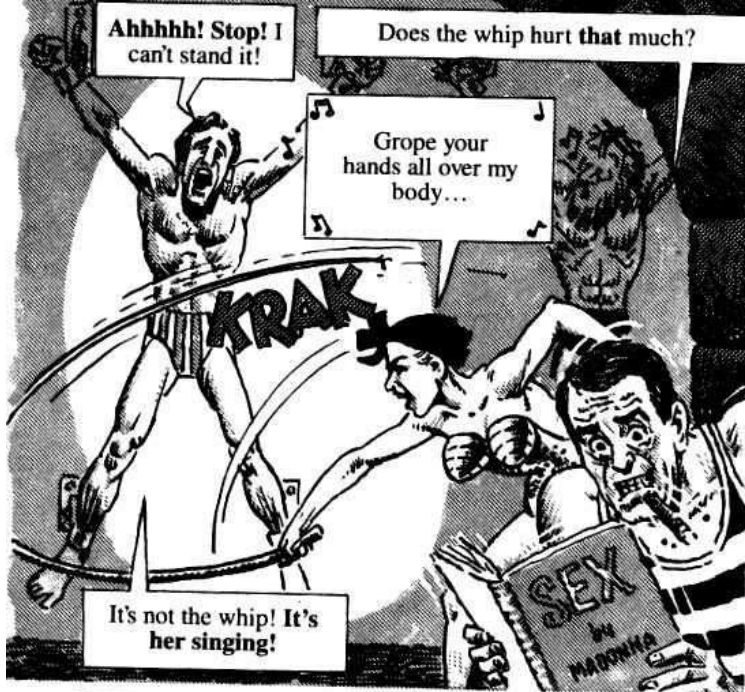

From now on it's going to be fresh zucchini in a light tarragon sauce. We're eating healthy, healthy, healthy!

The zucchini is bad enough, but getting used to two mothers ain't gonna be easy.

Hey, what's going on?

You're not on 'Home Improvement' any more. Spam. This is either a Madonna video, or you're being tenderized for Jeffrey Dahmer's next meal.

I think you went a little too far on this one, Spam.

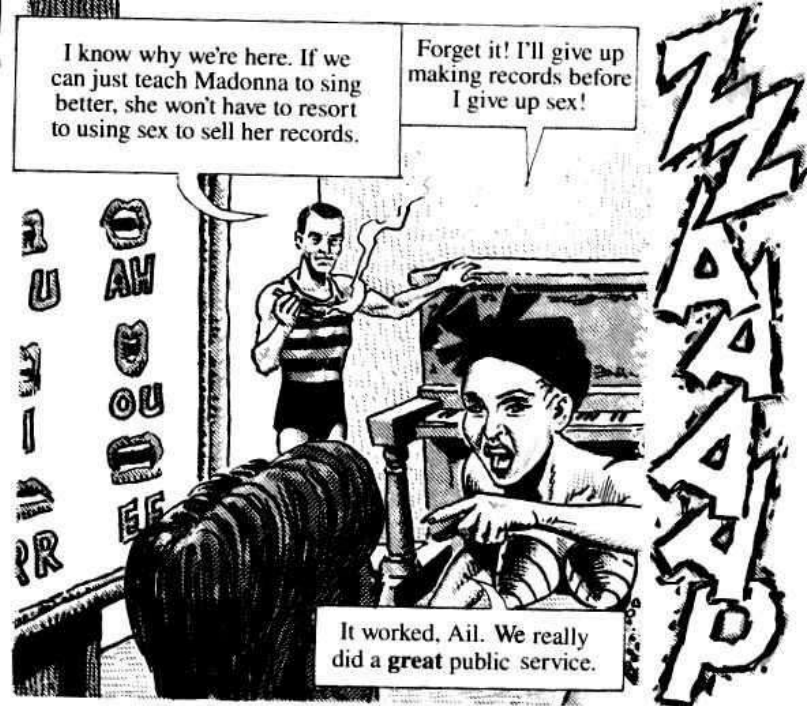

Ahhhhh! Stop! I can't stand it!

Does the whip hurt that much?

Grope your hands all over my body...

It's not the whip! It's her singing!

I know why we're here. If we can just teach Madonna to sing better, she won't have to resort to using sex to sell her records.

Forget it! I'll give up making records before I give up sex!

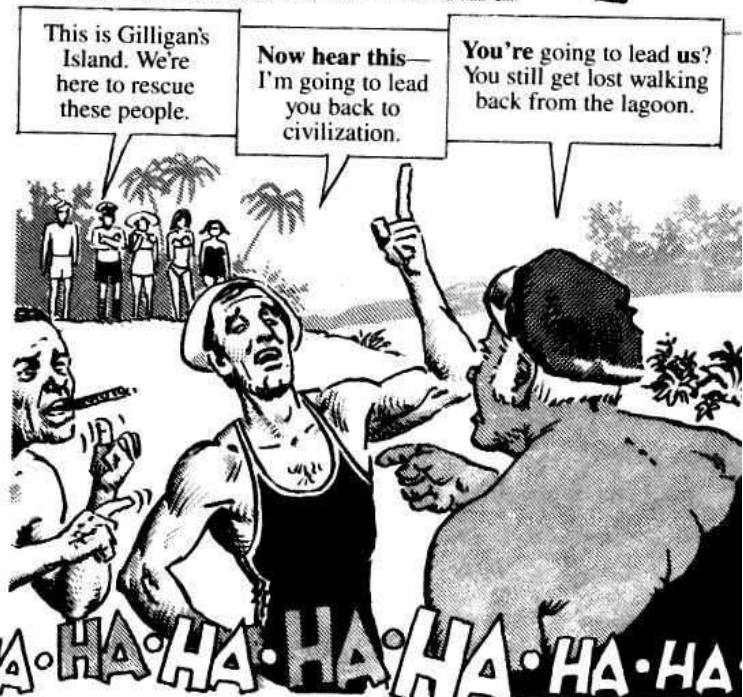

It worked, Ail. We really did a great public service.

Gilligan, you idiot! You let that raft get away. Now how do you expect us to get off this island?

The heck with the raft. Ginger's taking a shower!

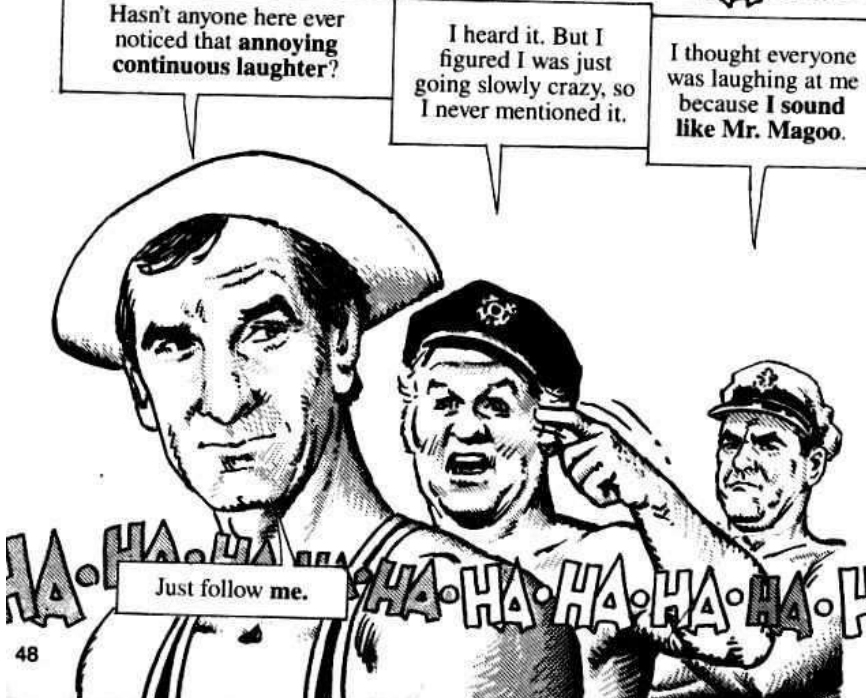

Where!? Where?!

This is Gilligan's Island. We're here to rescue these people.

Now hear this—I'm going to lead you back to civilization.

You're going to lead us? You still get lost walking back from the lagoon.

Hasn't anyone here ever noticed that annoying continuous laughter?

I heard it. But I figured I was just going slowly crazy, so I never mentioned it.

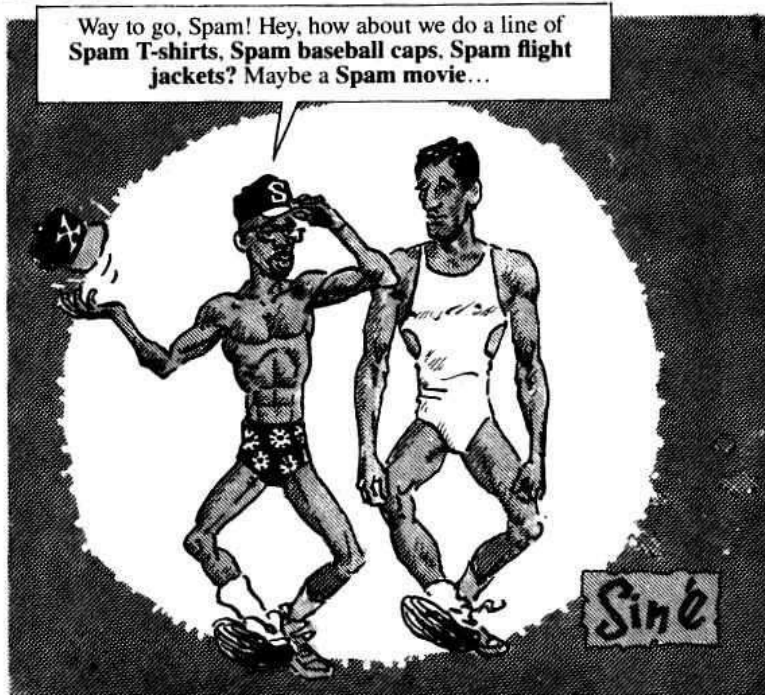

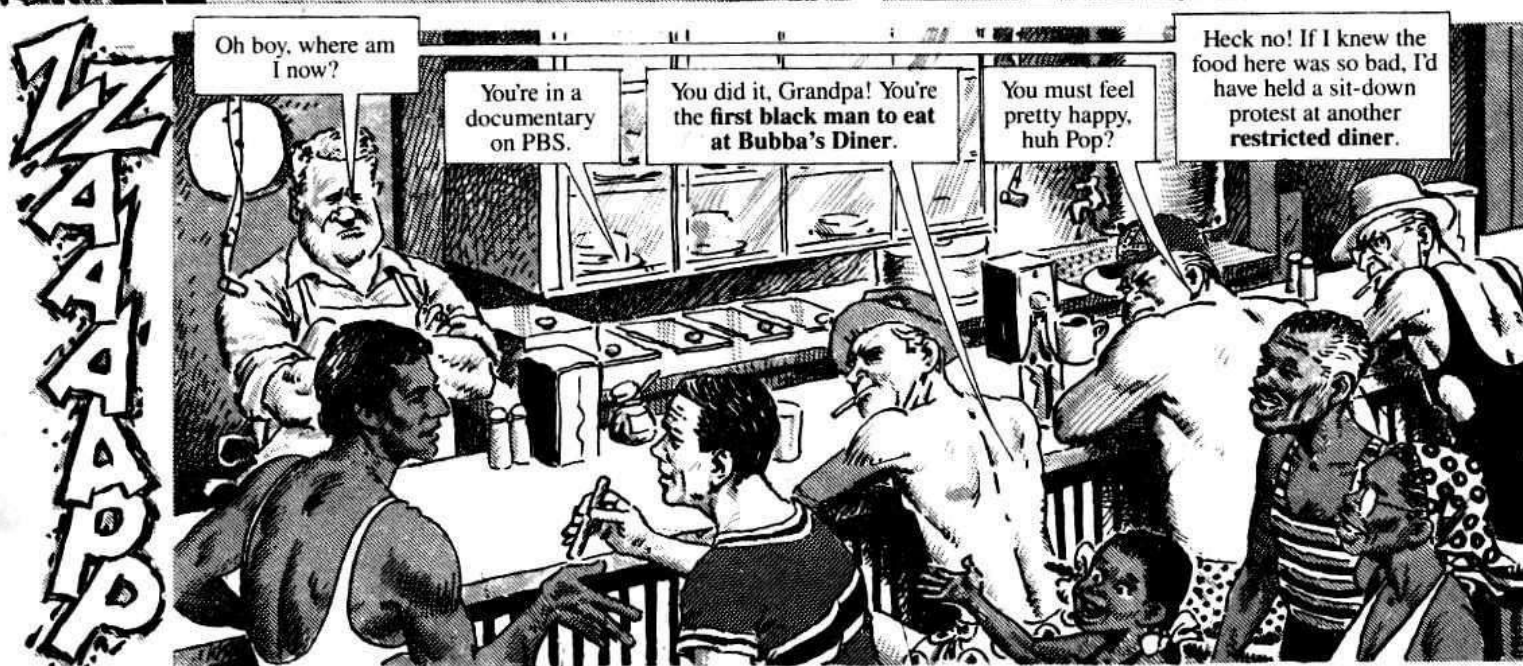

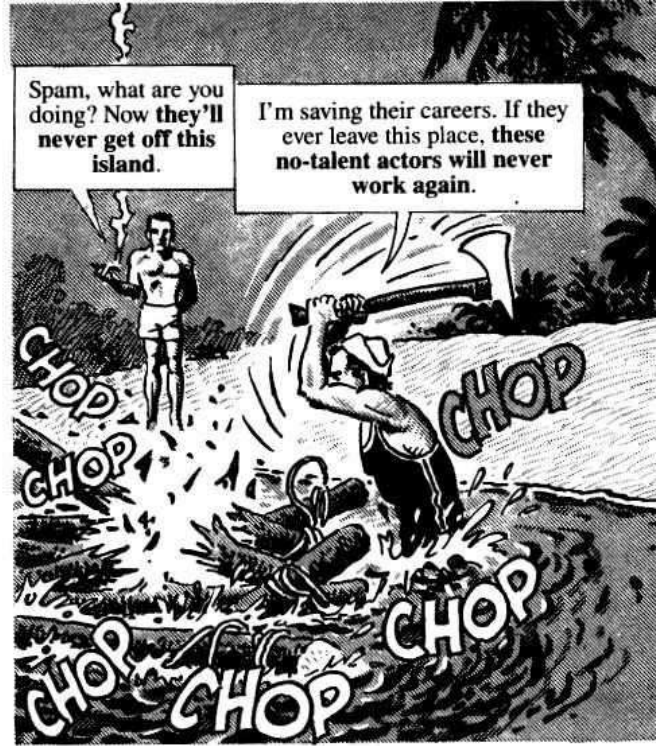

I thought everyone was laughing at me because I sound like Mr. Magoo.

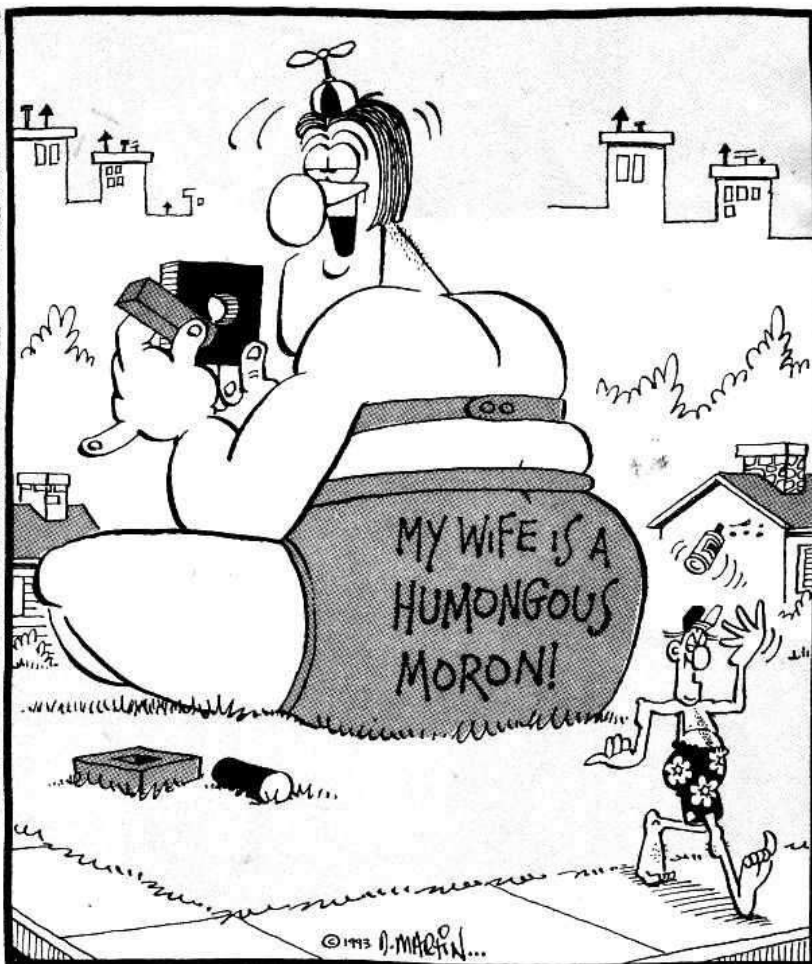

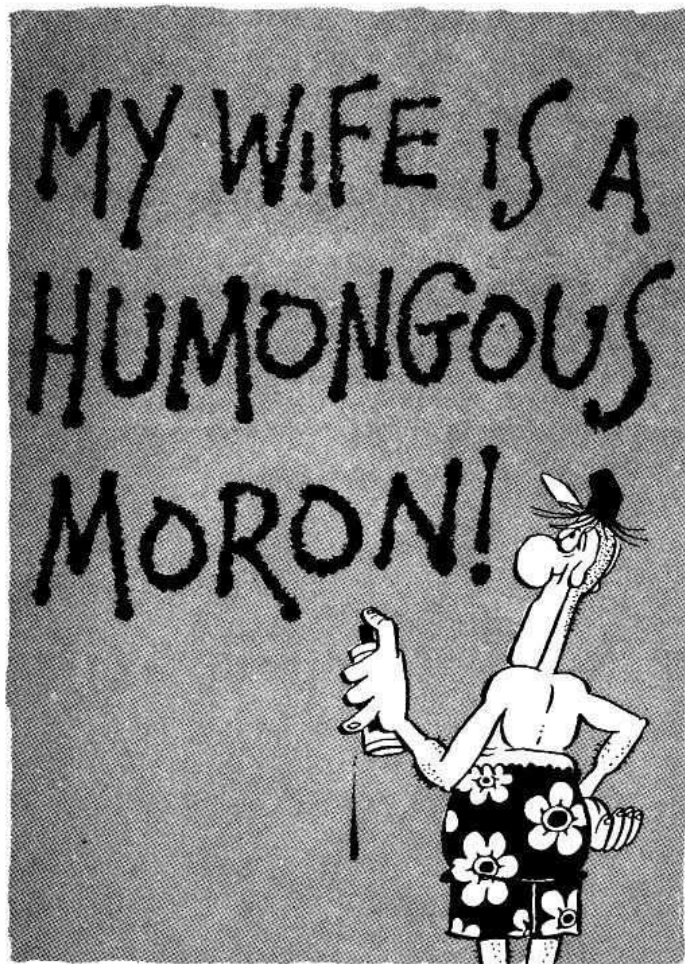

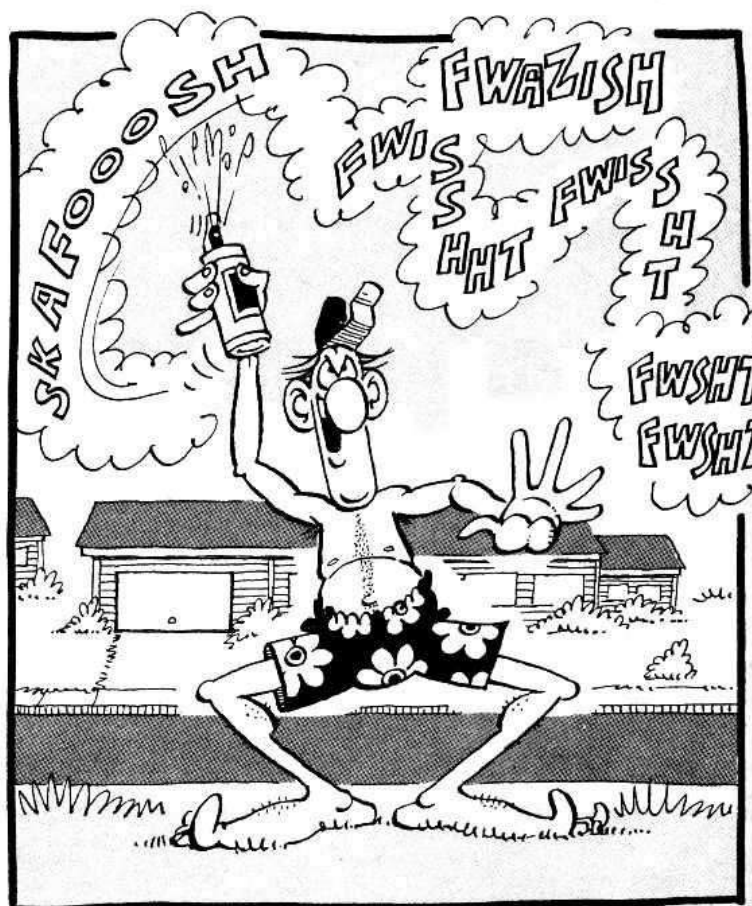

The laughter's coming from the other side of the island!

That's right, little buddy! And where there's laughter, there's usually people!

Just follow me.
